Plaintiff,

ORDER GRANTING MOTIONS TO STRIKE AND FOR DEFAULT

v.

HPC IT EDUCATION CENTER, a Hong Kong Company, and SAM YUEN, an individual,

Defendants.

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff Dr. JKL, Limited filed a complaint against defendants HPC IT Education Center (“HPC”), and Sam Yuen alleging: (1) copyright infringement in violation of 17 U.S.C § 501; (2) trademark infringement in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1127; (3) false designation of origin in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1125; (4) breach of written contract; and (5) breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Defendant Yuen filed an “Answer & Defence to the Complaint” (sic) (the “Answer”), as well as a letter addressed to the Court, on behalf of himself and defendant HPC. Plaintiff has moved to strike defendants’ Answer and for a default judgment against defendants pursuant to Rule 55(b)(2) of Federal Rules Civil Procedure. For the reasons stated below, both motions are granted and judgment is entered in favor of plaintiff.

II. RELEVANT FACTS

Plaintiff's complaint alleges that its founding director, Paul C. Poon, developed a novel software product called "JKL Chinese Typing System," for which plaintiff owns the exclusive license under Poon's copyright. Poon developed the JKL Chinese Typing System in San Jose, California, where plaintiff, a Hong Kong corporation, maintains its headquarters and principal place of business and where it conducts all of its marketing, sales, and service activities related to the system. Plaintiff alleges that, pursuant to a 2007 agreement (the "2007 Agreement"), HPC agreed to sell at least 8,800 JKL Chinese Typing System licenses to customers in Hong Kong and to pay plaintiff $8.52 per license. This agreement also required HPC to take over the lease for a storefront in Hong Kong (the "HPC Storefront"). According to plaintiff, defendants breached the 2007 Agreement by failing to sell the required licenses, by never paying plaintiff for the unsold licenses, and by cancelling the then-existing lease for the HPC Storefront, executing their own new lease and misappropriating the original security deposit.

The complaint also alleges that, after failing to honor the 2007 Agreement, defendants sought to continue as authorized Hong Kong distributors of the JKL Chinese Typing System and assured plaintiff that they would eventually be able to meet plaintiff's sales requirements. Accordingly, the parties entered into an agreement in 2009 (the "2009 Agreement"), under which HPC agreed to sell 15,000 copies of the JKL Chinese Typing System licenses during the first year. Rather than sell the licenses and pay plaintiff the contracted licensing fee, however, defendants allegedly appropriated sales opportunities for themselves (at least 3,000 during the life of the 2009 Agreement), posted versions of the JKL Chinese Typing System product on the HPC website for free customer download (which they were not authorized to do), and designed marketing materials to convey the idea that HPC (and not Poon and plaintiff) had developed and owned the JKL Chinese Typing System licenses. Plaintiff also alleges that defendants, in violation of the 2009 Agreement, attempted to hide the identity of JKL Chinese Typing System customers from plaintiff, and that they refused to make thousands of sales where they deemed the customers' offers insufficiently profitable to HPC. Lastly, plaintiff alleges that, even after the termination of the 2009 Agreement,

1 HPC continued to market, advertise and make unauthorized sales of the JKL Chinese Typing 2 System licenses until plaintiff was able to deactivate those licenses.

3 Plaintiff filed its complaint on October 19, 2009, and on that same date served a copy of the 4 complaint and summons by email and overnight mail on T.H. Koo & Associates, who at that time 5 were counsel for defendants. T.H. Koo & Associates acknowledged receipt of the complaint and 6 summons by email on October 23, 2009. On January 13, 2010, defendant Yuen filed the Answer 7 and letter to the Court. In the Answer, Yuen generally denies all of the facts alleged and maintains 8 that Hong Kong would be a more convenient forum for this case, but fails specifically to address 9 most of the individual allegations made in the complaint.

10 On February 10, 2010, plaintiff informed defendants and T.H. Koo & Associates of a case 11 management conference scheduled for March 11, 2010. In that same correspondence, plaintiff 12 advised defendants that, pursuant to the Northern District of California Local Rules (the “Local 13 Rules”), the parties must confer regarding possible Alternative Dispute Resolution (“ADR”) prior to 14 the initial case management conference and sent defendants several ADR-related forms as well as 15 the Local Rules and a copy of Rule 26(f) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. By a reply email 16 on February 11, 2010, T.H. Koo & Associates informed plaintiff’s counsel that they no longer 17 represented defendants.

18 Defendants never responded regarding ADR or the case management conference, and on 19 February 18, 2010 plaintiff filed an application for default judgment, which the clerk entered on 20 February 26, 2010. Plaintiff then filed its motion for default judgment on May 13, 2010, to which 21 defendant Yuen responded two months later by filing the same letter and Answer on behalf of 22 himself and defendant HPC that he had filed on January 13, 2010. In its motion, plaintiff requests 23 $150,000 based upon its actual damages and defendants’ illicit profits from the copyright 24 infringement claim, $60,628.32 (trebled) based upon trademark infringement in violation of the 25 Lanham Act, and attorney’s fees in the amount of $17,442.50 with costs of $440.52.<sup>1</sup>

26
27 <sup>1</sup> Plaintiff presents its request for damages in a confusing and inconsistent manner. In the body of the 28 motion for default judgment, it requests damages consistent with the summary above. In the concluding paragraph of the motion, however, it requests “$150,000 in actual damages and profits

The Court held a hearing on the motion to strike on July 22, 2010, at which neither defendants nor counsel for defendants appeared. At that hearing, in light of defendants' previously filed Answer and letter to the Court, the Court declined to rule on the motion to strike and directed plaintiff to file a motion to strike the Answer. Plaintiff filed its motion to strike on July 27, 2010, to which defendants have not responded. A subsequent hearing on the motion for default judgment, as well as on the motion to strike, was held on September 9, 2010. Again, neither defendants nor counsel for defendants made an appearance. At the September 9, 2010 hearing, the Court requested plaintiff's counsel to provide supplemental briefing on the question of personal jurisdiction, which counsel provided on September 24, 2010. Defendants have made no appearances in the case since Yuen filed his letter with the Court on July 12, 2010.

III. LEGAL STANDARD

A corporation or other artificial entity must be represented by licensed counsel. See, e.g., Rowland v. California Men's Colony, 506 U.S. 194, 201-202 (1993) (noting that 28 U.S.C. § 1654 does not allow corporations, partnerships, or associations to appear in federal court other than through a licensed attorney); Civil L.R. 3-9(b) ("A corporation, unincorporated association, partnership or other such entity may appear only through a member of the bar of this Court."). Therefore, while pro se litigants can represent themselves, they cannot represent corporations, companies or other artificial entities. Further, although pro se litigants are held to a lesser pleading standard than are other parties, see Federal Exp. Corp. v. Holowecki, 552 U.S. 389, 402 (2008) (pro on the copyright and trademark infringement claims, $64,623.14 in breach of contract claims, treble damages on the Lanham Act claim, and plaintiff's attorneys and costs (sic), in an amount to be fixed by the Court pursuant to Local Rule 5-3." Mot. Default J. at 15. In an affidavit filed with the motion for default judgment, Poon represents that the misappropriated security deposit for the HPC Storefront totaled $3,994.82 and that the financial injuries sustained as a result of defendants' breach of the 2007 Agreement and the 2009 Agreement totaled $60,628.32, for combined breach of contract damages of $64,623.14. In the motion itself, however, plaintiff omits any discussion of the amount of the security deposit, stating instead that the contract damages for lost profits amounted to $60,628.32 but then listing a total of $64,623.14 for breach of contract damages in the motion's conclusion. Additionally, despite the fact that plaintiff maintains in its motion for default judgment that it has "prove[d] defendants' revenue" and has pled copyright infringement damages of $150,000, nothing in the complaint, the motion for default judgment or any of the attached affidavits actually establishes the basis for this amount. Lastly, counsel for plaintiff includes an affidavit stating that it incurred $17,442.50 in attorney's fees and $440.52 in costs. The billing statement attached to this affidavit, however, consists of a summary of the fees and fails to apportion any of the billing or to provide a narrative explaining any of the expenses.

1 se pleadings are to be “liberally construed”), Local Rule 3-9(b) provides that “[a] person
2 representing him or herself without an attorney is bound by the Federal Rules, as well as by all 3 applicable local rules. Sanctions (including default or dismissal) may be imposed for failure to 4 comply with local rules.” Civil L.R. 3-9(a). A pro se litigant, then, must comply with both the local 5 and the Federal Rules, both in terms of pleading requirements and filing deadlines.

6 In responding to a complaint under Rule 8(b), a party must “state in short terms its defenses 7 to each claim asserted against it” and “admit or deny all allegations asserted against it by an 8 opposing party.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(1). “A party that intends in good faith to deny all the 9 allegations of a pleading – including the jurisdictional grounds – may do so by a general denial. A 10 party that does not intend to deny all the allegations must either specifically deny designated 11 allegations or generally deny all except those specifically admitted.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(3).

12 Pursuant to Rule 55(b)(2), the court may enter a default judgment where the clerk, under 13 Rule 55(a), has previously entered the party's default based upon failure to plead or otherwise 14 defend the action. Fed.R.Civ.P. 55(b). Following entry of default, a district court may in its 15 discretion grant relief upon an application for default judgment. Aldabe v. Aldabe, 616 F.2d 1089, 16 1092 (9th Cir. 1980). Factors that a district court may consider in exercising its discretion include:
17 (1) the possibility of prejudice to the plaintiff; (2) the merits of the plaintiff's substantive claim; (3) 18 the sufficiency of the complaint; (4) the sum of money at stake in the action; (5) the possibility of a 19 dispute concerning material facts; (6) whether the default was due to excusable neglect; and (7) the 20 strong policy underlying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure favoring decisions on the merits.
21 Eitel v. McCool, 782 F.2d 1470, 1471-72 (9th Cir. 1986). Factual allegations detailed in the 22 complaint are taken as true, except for those allegations relating to damages. See TeleVideo Sys., 23 Inc. v. Heidenthal, 826 F.2d 915, 917 (9th Cir. 1987); Philip Morris USA v. Castworld Products,

25 the truth of [plaintiff's] averments.”). “A party seeking default judgment must state a claim upon 26 which it may recover.” Philip Morris USA, 219 F.R.D. at 501. A plaintiff must also prove all

3 IV. Discussion

4 A. Personal Jurisdiction

5 As an initial matter, plaintiff has established that this Court may exercise personal 6 jurisdiction over defendants. First, defendants acknowledged receipt of service of the complaint, 7 and waived any objection to such service, when they filed the Answer. Although a federal court 8 lacks personal jurisdiction over a defendant until the defendant has been served in accordance with 9 Rule 4, see Jackson v. Hayakawa, 682 F.2d 1344, 1347 (9th Cir.1982), “Rule 4 is a flexible rule that 10 should be liberally construed so long as a party receives sufficient notice of the complaint.” United 11 Food & Commercial Workers Union, Locals 197, 373, 428, 588, 775, 839, 870, 1119, 1179, and 12 1532 v. Alpha Beta Co., 736 F.2d 1371, 1382 (9th Cir.1984). Additionally, while simply providing 13 “actual notice” or “naming the defendant in the complaint” is insufficient to establish personal 14 jurisdiction without “substantial compliance with Rule 4,” a “general appearance or responsive 15 pleading by a defendant that fails to dispute personal jurisdiction will waive any defect in service or 16 personal jurisdiction.” Benny v. Pipes, 799 F.2d 489, 492 (9th Cir. 1986) (citing Jackson, 682 F.2d 17 at 1347); Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(h)(1). A general appearance “ordinarily is an overt act by which the party 18 comes into court and submits to the jurisdiction of the court. This is an affirmative act involving 19 knowledge of the suit and an intention to appear.” Id. (citing 28 Fed. Proc. (L. Ed.) § 65.137 at 526 20 (1984)); see also Wilson v. Moore and Associates, Inc., 564 F.2d 366, 368-69 (9th Cir.1977) 21 (informal contact between parties constitutes appearance when defendant shows “clear purpose to 22 defend the suit”). Here, defendants’ Answer constituted a general appearance. Although, it failed to 23 conform to the requirements of Rule 8, the Answer was nonetheless an overt act by defendants that 24 demonstrates knowledge of the lawsuit and an intention and purpose to defend against that suit.
25 Moreover, by failing to raise service or personal jurisdiction in the Answer, defendants have waived 26 any defect in such service or personal jurisdiction.

Second, based upon the complaint and evidence produced by plaintiff, this Court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over defendants is appropriate under the circumstances. Although the 2007 and 2009 Agreements were for the sale of JKL Chinese Typing System licenses in Hong Kong, these licenses relate to a United States copyright and are owned by a company (plaintiff) whose headquarters and primary place of business are located in Santa Clara, California. In short, by negotiating with a citizen of California, defendants purposefully availed themselves of the privilege of conducting business here and are thereby subject to personal jurisdiction in the state over disputes arising out of those negotiations. See Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 473 (1985) ("with respect to interstate contractual obligations, we have emphasized that parties who 'reach out beyond one state and create continuing relationships and obligations with citizens of another state' are subject to regulation and sanctions in the other State for the consequences of their activities.") (citing Travelers Health Assn. v. Virginia, 339 U.S. 643, 647 (1950)); see also Panavision v. Toeppen, 141 F.3d 1316, 1320 (9th Cir.1998) (specific jurisdiction exists where (1) nonresident defendant purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, (2) the claim arises out of defendant's forum-related activities; and (3) exercise of jurisdiction must be reasonable); 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c)(1) ("a corporation shall be deemed to be a citizen of any State... where it has its principal place of business."). Therefore, the exercise of personal jurisdiction by this Court over defendants in this action is appropriate.

B. Motion to Strike

Plaintiff has moved to strike the Answer as to both defendant Yuen and defendant HPC. In support of this motion, plaintiff argues that defendants failed to answer within 21 days of being served with the summons and complaint, as required by Rule 12(a)(1)(a)(i), and that the Answer they filed fails to meet the pleading requirements of Rule 8(b). Specifically, plaintiff maintains that, because the Answer admits certain allegations relating to the nature of the relationship between the parties, defendants cannot employ a general denial under Rule 8(b)(3). In other words, defendants' response to the complaint must comply with Rule 8(b)(1) and admit or deny all of the particular allegations asserted. Given that the Answer is limited to forum non-conveniens and never specifically addresses any of these allegations, the argument goes, it fails to meet the requirements of Rule 8(b) and therefore must be stricken. Additionally, plaintiff argues that the Answer cannot be construed as an answer on behalf of defendant HPC because defendant Yuen is not admitted to practice law in California.

While the Answer does in fact fail to meet the requirements of Rule 8(b), the Court need not address the sufficiency of the pleading for two reasons. First, as a corporation, defendant HPC must be represented by licensed counsel. See, e.g., Rowland, 506 U.S. at 201-202; Civil L.R. 3-9(b). Simply put, defendant Yuen, a pro se litigant not licensed to practice law in California, cannot appear on behalf of HPC. Therefore, to the extent that the Answer was filed on behalf of defendant HPC, it must be stricken. Second, although pro se litigants, as noted above, are held to a lesser pleading standard than other parties, they are still bound by the federal and local rules and cannot simply ignore a motion filed by the opposing party. See Civil L.R. 3-9(a). Here, defendants have failed to appear in the case since July 12, 2010 and have filed no response to plaintiff's motion to strike. Therefore, the motion to strike is granted and the Answer is stricken from the record as to both defendants.

C. Motion for Default Judgment

1. Merits of the Claim, Sufficiency of the Complaint, and Prejudice to Plaintiff

Under an Eitel analysis, the merits of plaintiff's substantive claims and the sufficiency of the complaint are often analyzed together. These two factors require that plaintiffs' allegations "state a claim on which the [plaintiff] may recover." Danning v. Lavine, 572 F.2d 1386, 1388 (9th Cir. 1978). Additionally, while prejudice to the plaintiff is an independent factor to be analyzed under Eitel, such prejudice necessarily flows from the plaintiff's ability to demonstrate the merits of its claim because, in the absence of a default judgment, plaintiff "would be without other recourse for recovery" to which it is entitled. Philip Morris USA, 219 F.R.D. at 499.

The elements of copyright infringement, plaintiff's first claim for relief, are "(1) ownership of a valid copyright; and (2) that the defendant violated the copyright owner's exclusive rights under the Copyright Act." Ellison v. Robertson, 357 F.3d 1072, 1076 (9th Cir.2004) (citing, inter alia, 17

U.S.C. § 501(a)). Rights under the Copyright Act include the right to reproduce the copyrighted work, to prepare derivative works based upon the copyrighted work, to distribute copies of the work and to display the copyrighted work publicly. 15 U.S.C. § 106. Here, as noted above, plaintiff alleges that Poon, Dr. JKL, Limited's founding director, is the sole owner of the JKL Chinese Typing System copyright and that plaintiff is the exclusive licensee. Compl. ¶¶ 29-30. The complaint also alleges that defendants performed unauthorized sales, internet downloads and marketing of the JKL Chinese Typing System. Compl. ¶¶ 31-33. Therefore, plaintiff has adequately pled that defendants infringed upon its copyright in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 501.<sup>2</sup>

In its complaint, plaintiff grounds its second claim for relief on trademark infringement in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1127. Section 1127 simply lays out the construction and definitions of Title 15 of the United States Code, however, while Section 1114 lays out the elements and remedies for trademark infringement. Moreover, in the motion for default judgment, plaintiff rests its claim for trademark infringement not on Section 1127 (or Section 1114), but rather on Section 1125(a) and the fact that "[t]he Lanham Act prohibits the infringement of trademarks, even if they have not been registered." Mot. Default J. at 9.<sup>3</sup> Despite this confusion, plaintiff has adequately pled trademark infringement, which requires plaintiff to show that defendants used (1) a reproduction, counterfeit, copy or colorable imitation of plaintiff's registered trademark; (2) without plaintiff's consent; (3) in commerce; (4) in connection with the sale, offering for sale, distribution or advertising of any goods; (5) where such use is likely to cause confusion, or to cause a mistake or to deceive. 15 U.S.C. § 1114(1)(a); Brookfield Commc'n v. West Coast Entm't, 174 F.3d 1036, 1046-47 (9th Cir.1999). The critical determination is "whether an alleged trademark infringer's use of a mark creates a likelihood that the consuming public will be confused as to who makes that product." Jada Toys, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc., 518 F.3d 628, 632 (9th Cir.2008) (citations omitted). Here, plaintiff

<sup>2</sup> In its motion for default judgment, plaintiff also maintains that it has introduced evidence, by way of a declaration of counsel, that the JKL Chinese Typing System copyright has been registered. A close review of the declaration, however, reveals that no copyright registration was included. This fact does not change the Court's ruling, though, because "by defaulting, [d]efendant is deemed to have admitted the truth of [plaintiff's] averments." Philip Morris USA, 219 F.R.D. at 499.

<sup>3</sup> Additionally, the motion for default judgment appears to transpose the second and third claims for relief.

1 alleges that it was the sole owner of the JKL Chinese Typing System trademark, that defendants 2 performed unauthorized sales, internet downloads and marketing of the product, and that defendants 3 had employees tell customers that only HPC-sold licenses were authentic while those sold in the Dr.
4 JKL, Limited store were counterfeit versions. Compl. ¶¶ 23, 37, 40-41. All of this combines to 5 form an adequately pled trademark infringement claim.

6 To prove its third claim for relief based on a false designation of origin in violation of 7 section 43(a) of the Lanham Act, plaintiff must show that: 1) the terms or logos in question are valid 8 and protectable trademarks; 2) the plaintiff owns these marks as trademarks; 3) the plaintiff used 9 these marks in commerce; and 4) the defendants used false or misleading descriptions of fact or 10 “terms or designs similar to plaintiff’s marks without the consent of the plaintiff in a manner that is 11 likely to cause confusion among ordinary purchasers as to the source of the goods.” 15 U.S.C. § 12 1125(a); see Chimney Safety Inst. of Am. v. Chimney King, 2004 WL 1465699, *2 (N.D.Cal. May 13 27, 2004) (citing Brookfield Commc’ns, Inc. v. West Coast Entm’t Corp., 174 F.3d 1036, 1046-47 n.
14 8 (9th Cir.1999)). As with the trademark infringement claim, plaintiff alleges that it owned and 15 used a valid trademark for the JKL Chinese Typing System, that defendants performed unauthorized 16 sales, internet downloads and marketing of the product, that defendants designed marketing 17 materials to convey the idea that HPC (and not Poon and plaintiff) developed and owned the 18 licenses, and that defendants had their employees tell customers that only HPC-sold licenses were 19 authentic while those sold in the Dr. JKL, Limited store were counterfeit versions. Compl. ¶¶ 23, 20 37, 40-41. Accordingly, plaintiff has sufficiently pled defendants’ false designation of origin in 21 violation of the Lanham Act.

22 Lastly, plaintiff demonstrates the merits of its fourth and fifth claims for relief, for breach of 23 written contract and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, in alleging that the parties 24 had a written contract that plaintiff fully performed but that defendants breached. Compl. ¶¶ 49-52, 25 54-59. In particular, plaintiff alleges that defendants failed to sell the required licenses, appropriated 26 sales opportunities for themselves, misappropriated the security deposit for the HPC Storefront, hid 27

1 the identity of JKL Chinese Typing System customers from plaintiff, and refused to make thousands 2 of sales where they deemed the customers' offers were insufficiently profitable to HPC.

3 Having demonstrated the merits of its claims, the sufficiency of the complaint and the fact 4 that it will suffer prejudice in the absence of a default judgment because it would otherwise lack 5 recourse for recovery, plaintiff has established that these factors all favor the granting of a default 6 judgment.

7 2. Amount of Money at Stake

8 Under the fourth Eitel factor, "the court must consider the amount of money at stake in 9 relation to the seriousness of Defendant's conduct." PepsiCo Inc. v. Cal. Sec. Cans, 238 F.Supp.2d 10 1172 (C.D.Cal.2002); see also Eitel, 782 F.2d at 1471-72. The Lanham Act provides that a 11 trademark owner may recover: (1) defendant's profits, (2) any damages sustained by plaintiff, and 12 (3) the costs of the action where plaintiff has established trademark infringement. 15 U.S.C. § 13 1117(a). Alternatively, a trademark owner may elect to receive an award of statutory damages in 14 trademark actions involving the use of a counterfeit mark. 15 U.S.C. § 1117(c). Such statutory 15 damages can be up to $2,000,000 per counterfeit mark upon a finding that the infringement was 16 willful. 15 U.S.C. § 1117(c)(2). Willful infringement occurs when the defendant knowingly and 17 intentionally infringes on a trademark. See Earthquake Sound Corp. v. Bumper Indus., 352 F.3d 18 1210, 1216-17 (9th Cir.2003). Willfulness can also be inferred from a defendant's failure to defend.
19 Philip Morris USA, Inc., 219 F.R.D. at 500. If statutory damages are elected, a court has wide 20 discretion in determining the amount of statutory damages to be awarded. Columbia Pictures 21 Television, Inc. v. Krypton Broad. of Birmingham, 259 F.3d 1186, 1194 (9th Cir.2001). However, 22 "[i]f the violation consists of 'intentionally using a mark or designation, knowing such mark or 23 designation is a counterfeit mark,' section 1117(b) instructs that the court 'shall' treble the 24 damages." Nintendo of America, Inc. v. Dragon Pacific Intern., 40 F.3d 1007, 1010 (9th Cir. 1994).
25 Similarly, the Copyright Act provides the owner of a copyright with a recovery of his actual 26 damages and any additional profits realized by the infringer. 17 U.S.C. § 505; see also Sony Corp.
27 of America v. Universal City Studios, Inc., 464 U.S. 417, 434 (1984).

Here, plaintiff alleges that defendants conducted unauthorized sales and marketing of its copyrighted work and that they misrepresented HPC to be the developer and owner of the related license. Therefore, plaintiff is entitled to recover statutory damages under both the Copyright Act and the Lanham Act, in addition to damages for breach of contract, assuming that it proves all of the damages sought. Given defendants' infringing use of the JKL Chinese Typing System license, the likelihood that its conduct would cause confusion or mistake or otherwise deceive customers, and its failure to comply with the judicial process or to participate in a meaningful way in the present litigation, defendants have engaged in willful use of a counterfeit mark, thereby justifying the imposition of a monetary award. Accordingly, this factor favors granting default judgment.

3. Potential Disputes of Material Fact and Excusable Neglect

The fifth Eitel factor considers the possibility of dispute as to any material facts in the case. Upon entry of default, all well-pleaded facts in the complaint are taken as true, except those relating to damages. TeleVideo Sys., Inc., 826 F.2d at 917-18. Here, Plaintiff filed a well-pleaded complaint alleging the facts necessary to establish its claims, and the court clerk entered default against the defendants. Defendants' Answer, while raising the question of forum non conveniens, failed to address any of the specific allegations in the complaint. Thus, no dispute has been raised regarding the material averments of the complaint, and the likelihood that any genuine issue may exist is, at best, remote. Moreover, there is no evidence in the record that defendants' failure to appear or otherwise defend against the motion to strike and the motion for default judgment is the result of excusable neglect. Rather, since re-filing the Answer and letter to the Court on July 12, 2010, defendants have failed to appear despite having been served with the motions and the Court order setting the hearing date. These factors, therefore, favor the entry of default.

4. Strong Policy Favoring Decisions on the Merits

Although the Federal Rules espouse a preference for resolving cases on their merits, see Eitel, 782 F.2d at 1472, defendants' failure to comply with the judicial process makes a decision on the merits likely impossible. Defendant HPC, having never been represented by counsel, has never made an appearance recognized under the federal or local rules. Moreover, rather than respond to the motion for default judgment, defendants submitted the same letter and statutorily deficient “answer” and have not engaged in the process since; they have not responded to the motion to strike nor appeared at any of the scheduled hearings. Despite the preference for resolving cases on their merits, then, this factor favors an entry of default.

D. Remedies

As stated above, although not entirely clear from the motion, plaintiff appears to be requesting $150,000 in statutory damages for its actual damages as well defendants’ illicit profits based upon the copyright infringement, $60,628.32 (trebled) for the Lanham Act violation, $64,623.14 for the breach of contract claim, $17,442.50 for attorney’s fees, and $440.52 in costs. There are several areas of concern, however, that arise with respect to the remedies. First, plaintiff omitted any evidence as to defendants’ illicit profits from the copyright infringement and therefore fails to prove how the $60,628.32 in actual damages becomes $150,000 in statutory damages. See Philip Morris USA, 219 F.R.D. at 501 (plaintiff must also prove all damages sought in the complaint). Without any basis for a statutory award of $150,000, then, the Court limits plaintiff’s damages for the copyright infringement claim to $60,628.32, which is the amount plaintiff proved through Poon’s declaration. Similarly, the Court awards plaintiff $3,994.82 for defendants’ misappropriation of the HPC Storefront security deposit. Additionally, although plaintiff alleges that defendants continued to market, advertise and make unauthorized sales of the JKL Chinese Typing System licenses after the 2009 Agreement was terminated, it fails to demonstrate any amount of loss attributable to any actions by defendants separate and apart from their breach of contract. In other words, all of the damages claimed by plaintiff are tethered to the losses it suffered as a result of defendants’ failure to honor the 2007 Agreement or the 2009 Agreement. Accordingly, the Court limits plaintiff’s award of damages to $64,623.14.<sup>4</sup>

Second, plaintiff’s request for $17,442.50 in attorney’s fees appears unduly excessive. Plaintiff’s counsel has submitted an affidavit that includes a single billing sheet indicating 55.2

<sup>4</sup> Although plaintiff requests treble damages under the Lanham Act, as discussed above, the damages that plaintiff has been able to prove relate to the injuries suffered as a result of the breach of contract and copyright infringement. Therefore, in exercising its discretion in granting default judgment, the Court declines to find that treble damages are appropriate under these circumstances.

1 hours of work performed, which translates to an hourly billing rate of $315.98. This billing sheet, 2 however, omits any explanation of the tasks performed during these 55.2 hours. In light of the 3 substance and context of the work involved, and absent any further showing by plaintiff, this 4 amount of time seems unreasonable. While plaintiff's counsel has filed a motion to strike as well as 5 a motion for default judgment, and has attended two hearings on the motions, given the complaint's 6 length, the legal and factual issues involved and the limited associated investigation, this 7 representation would not seem to require more than several hours of legal work. Calculated at 8 counsel's hourly rate ($315.98), 25 hours is more appropriate and realistic, thereby resulting in a 9 recovery of $7,899.50. Plaintiff's estimate of costs totals $440.52, which represents costs associated 10 with the legal representation and appears reasonable.

11 V. CONCLUSION

12 For the reasons stated above, plaintiff's motion to strike and motion for default judgment are 13 granted. As to damages, plaintiff's request shall be reduced to $64,623.14, its attorney's fees shall 14 be reduced to $7,899.50, and it shall be awarded costs of $440.52.
